Pressure sensor - Wikipedia

Absolute pressure sensor : This sensor measures the pressure relative to perfect vacuum. Gauge pressure sensor: This sensor measures the pressure relative to atmospheric pressure. A tire pressure gauge is an example of gauge pressure measurement; when it indicates zero, then the pressure it is measuring is the same as the ambient pressure.

What is the difference between a pressure sensor ...

Pressure Transducers and Transmitters Pressure transducers and pressure transmitters are very similar. A pressure transducer is an electromechanical device for translating pressure values into voltages across a high-impedance load (5,000 ohms or greater).

Fundamentals of Pressure Transducers | Hydraulics & Pneumatics

Usually transducers are selected so that system operating pressure is 50 to 60% of the transducer's maximum rated pressure. For example, a hydraulic system, normally operating in the 2500- to 3000-psi region, would usually use a 5000 psi transducer. In addition to providing a safety margin, this practice also makes a good compromise among performance characteristics.

Flush Diaphragm Pressure Transducers With flush diaphragm pressure transducers, the diaphragm is flush to the process. This eliminates a cavity above the diaphragm that could collect fluid matter from the process. In certain applications, this may be very undesirable. Those applications include monitoring the pressure of foods or liquids that have very high viscosity.
